

“May I appeal to all who live in this land to work in harmony and in cooperation for its general development. May I appeal to them to sink all party differences; to realise that the interests of any one set of people are closely bound up with the interests of the whole land; and that in the industrial and commercial growth of the country the interest, both of those who have adopted it, and of those who are born of the soil, will be fully served”

— Dorab Tata, speaking at the annual general meeting of the Tata Iron and Steel Company, held on October 18, 1917

A LEADER OF MANY PARTS

On his 150th birth anniversary, a look at the life and legacy of Dorab Tata, the architect who shaped the Tata group and cemented its place in the history of Indian business

By Philip Chacko